Founded: 1963. "Informal networks of citizens seeking to promote exploration of how technology and military power can be redirected toward prevention of war between nations."

Aims include: to inform and educate the public on man's increasing capabilities to create global safety systems; to focus public dialogue on global safety; to identify and clarify safe-initiatives that can be undertaken without endangering the national security. Has organized the Citizens Committee for Global Safety. Seeks to control war by establishing effective means of enforcing agreements on peaceful relations between nations; such means would include a global safety authority set up by all nations and supported by governments, business, communications, foundations, churches and civic groups and the United Nations. Maintains library of pamphlets, journals and clippings dealing with the military, political science, theology and arms control. Although all correspondence is handled through the Washington office, the association is based in Chappaqua, NY. Publications: Checkpoint, quarterly; has also published War Safety Control Report (1963).
